Exposition Begins Second Season Run

24,699 Thru Turnstiles on Opening Day

New Lighting Effects Are Main Feature

Sunshine pierced the storm clouds Wednesday afternoon as 24,699 gathered to open the 1936 Exposition and the million-dollar rain that fell after dark only added beauty to the glorious lighting display that was turned on by President Roosevelt when he pressed a golden key in far-off Washington.

"I refuse to apologize for this million-dollar rain," said Gov. Merriam as he spoke just before Josephus Daniels, ambassador to Mexico and personal representative of President Roosevelt, delivered the nation's best wishes to the new Exposition. The crowds agreed with him.

The brilliant gathering of officials and honored guests refused to allow spirits to be dampened by evening showers that forced the holding of the ceremonies in the House of Hospitality instead of outside as originally planned.

The greetings from Daniels and the nation's sister republic, Mexico, delivered by Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera and Gov. Magana of Lower California were cheered to the echo by the crowds that came for the colorful evening ceremonies.

There was a gasp of expectation from the cheerful throng as the Exposition was hushed as word sped back to President Roosevelt that San Diego was ready for the crowning event of the opening day—the turning on of the tremendous lighting system.

The gasp turned into "ohs" and "ahs" of delight as the electric impulse release by the President's finger threw the master switch at the Exposition and the lights went on.

As many as could do so crowded into the House of Hospitality for the formal opening addresses last evening of Pres. Frank G. Belcher, Josephus Daniels, ambassador to Mexico, Gov. Merriam and others. The program, which had been announced for the Plaza del Pacifico, began at 6:30 p. m. Hundreds of other visitors on the grounds listened to the speeches near loud speakers in various buildings and arcades.

Gov. Merriam, to whom had been given a salute by guns of the 251st coast artillery, national guard, as he entered the grounds at 3 p. m., also received full military honors from a provisional company of the 251st commanded by Capt. C. L. Randall, at the California state building which he dedicated immediately after ceremonies at the Federal building.

"We'll order rain the next time we turn on the lights, too," one Exposition official said as he watched the play of rain that in turn seemed to fall in glorious sheets of snowy white, crimson and all the colors of the rainbow as it passed thru the lights.

Then the rain stopped and the crowds surged from buildings and arcades nto the streets to testify that the 1936 show was on its way to success.

Ambassador Daniels paid high tribute to the Exposition and to San Diego, where "converge the representatives of all Pan-America."

In dedicating the Federal building, Ambassador Daniels said: "I have confidence in this new Exposition, as I have confidence in San Diego. On behalf of the federal government I announce that we are proud to be a part of this beautiful and enormous undertaking."

Belcher introduced Gov. Magana of Baja, California, Najera, Mexico's ambassador, and Gov. Merriam. Each spoke briefly, Gov. Merriam adding that he "had no apologies to offer" for a rain so very welcome in San Diego.

Immediately after the dedication, visitors were welcomed into the building, where all departments of the national government are represented in graphic displays. As was the case last year, the treasury's exhibit of a $1,000,000 bill was immediately the center of interest for a throng of visitors.

Preceding opening of the gates at 2:30, thousands were waiting at both main entrances and within an hour 10,000 had entered. The municipal band entertained the waiting throngs with a concert in the park near the west gate.

The party of distinguished visitors arrived at the east gate at 3 p. m. and was escorted to Plaza del Pacifico by the Naval training station band under leadership of C. E. Dudrow. There was a concert at the plaza before the arrival of the queen of the fair, little Jacqueline Harbarger; her pages, Martha and Patsy Brown, flower girls, lackeys, guardsmen and footmen.

On her gilded throne the queen introduced Belcher, who declared the Exposition open for its second season. After his announcment Belcher and Queen Jacqueline were borne away in a royal coach, drawn by two black horses.

In a marked holiday mood of festivity the crowds throughout the afternoon moved through the scores of exhibit buildings and private concessions, including the colorful House of Pacific Relations, the Christian Science Monitor building, dined at the many hospitable cafes, visited the Mormon exhibit, and enjoyed performances at the Old Globe theater.

Many chose the Palace of Foods & Beverages to dine at small lunch stands and cafes strategically located amid an array of commercial displays of products and mechanisms used in the preparation of foods.

Machinery used in the washing, sorting and boxing of oranges comprises one huge display. Hundreds of persons crowded the railing around this fascinating exhibit which reveals the methods used in the preparation of the fruit for shipping.

A large stage conveniently located near the west entrance to the Foods and Beverage palace is provided for programs and demonstrations.

Across the Avenida del Pacifico, is the federal housing administration exhibit in the Palace of Better Housing. A feature display embodies the 12 "talking and singing towers," the center attraction in this housing palace. Augmenting the big government exhibit is Modeltown, a host of miniature buildings reduced in scale to that of a normal sized structure.

Among the new exhibits is the Palace of Medical Science, sponsored by the San Diego County Medical society, the California Medical association, the American Medical association and the California State Dental society. The displays, claimed to be the most extensive yet displayed and far surpassing those at the Chicago's Century of Progress, will be augmented by science lecturers to be provided through cooperation of the American College of Surgeons. A story of progress in medicine, surgery and dentistry is provided.

An elaborate fountain representing the four corner stones of American democracy, the church, school, community and home, comprises the theme around which the displays in the Palace of Education are built. Every phase of American education is physically described through the array of exhibits in the palace. School districts, counties and private institutions have joined in these displays. Stanford, California Institute of Technology, California and U.S.C. are among the universities which have contributed displays. Sculptures by Frederick W. Schweigardt represent one of the most interesting exhibits in the building. Agriculture, home-making, child care, business, and mechanics provide subjects for many of the displays.

The hundreds of first-day visitors to the Palace of Education grasped the theme subject after a study of the elaborate fountain appropriately situated in the center of the room into which visitors come through the main entrance.

Fun-seekers joined in happy revelry at the new Palace of Entertainment situated in the Palisades section of the grounds. A large dance floor with a spacious stage for entertainment features utilizes most of the space in the structure. Located as it is in the area occupied by the federal, state, Ford and electricty palace buildings, the entertainment structure has added a livening influence to the zone principally devoted to the educational exhibits.

W.P.A. Labor to be Used on Mission Bay

Mission Bay State park will be built by San Diego men on WPA rolls and not by transients, as originally planned, Sen. Ed Fletcher announced Monday night on his return from Washington, D. C.

"When I left San Diego," he said, "the state park project was approved and ready to go. The only obstacle was possession of the camp at Camp Kearny to house the men. On my return from a four-week trip east, I find that the state park commission which sponsored the project as a transient camp job through the San Francisco office, is faced with the President's order to shut down completely or drastically curtail by April 1, all transient camps.

"While in San Francisco I contacted Frank Y. McLaughlin, WPA administrator for California, and as a result of the conference he gave me the following assurance:

" 'In view of the fact that WPA camp program will be either shut down completely or very drastically curtailed as soon as the demand for agricultural labor begins, probably about April 1, we believe it inadvisable to attempt the Mission Bay park project as a transient camp job.

" 'Therefore, we are rewriting the Mission Bay application, setting it up as a local WPA project to be manned with resident men. This new application will be signed March 10 by Capt. Harry W. Berdie, coordinator of federal and state projects for the division of natural resources, and will be forwarded to Washington immediately. In the ordinary course of events, we should be able to start work on the project within three to four weeks after the application leaves this office. Every effort will be made to expedite the review and approval of the application.'

"Mr. McLaughlin personally guaranteed to me that we would not lose our priority rights. Representatives of the state park commission will be here the first of the week to cooperate with the local agencies on detailed plans and specifications, with George White, the director here, preparatory to final approval from Washington."

DOG POISONER AT WORK

Reports have it that this week several dogs have been poisoned. Not just common dogs, but dogs that are real friends and pals to children. In one instance cited, the dog was a guardian to a child. It is also reported that the person who has been doing the poisoning is known.

If your dog is poisoned with strychnine, here is a remedy recommended by a person whose dog it saved: When the dog's hindquarters become paralyzed, which is the most outstanding symptom of poisoning, feed it lard or butter. If it will not eat of its own accord, force the lard or butter down the throat of the victim. Invariably, if rendered in time, this will save the dog's life.

Kiwanis Club Has Ladies Night Tuesday

The Kiwanis club held a meeting February 11, ladies' night, at the Woman's club, at which is moved and seconded that greetings and flowers would be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Hartvigsen.

In the absence of Mrs. Hartvigsen, Mrs. I. J. Claspill acted as chairman.

The program was in keeping with the spirit of St. Valentine's day, consisting of games and stunts which brought forth much laughter and gayety.

The program chairman announced that the speaker for February 19th would be Leland Stanford.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. VICTORIA KUNZ

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock from Bradley & Woolman's St. Cecelia chapel for Mrs. Victoria Kunz, 73, 4677 Santa Cruz avenue. She passed from this life into eternal rest on last Sunday morning, after being confined to her bed for a number of weeks.

Mrs. Kunz was a resident of Ocean Beach for many years and during this time made a great many friends. She was a great lover of nature and thus spent much of her time tending her own wonderful garden. Because of her willingness to help in time of need, her many friends here at the beach will indeed miss her pleasing and comforting words and generosity.

She was also a great worker for the Lutheran Mission church, which was started and founded by her generosity and through her help. In her memory and to the glory and honor of her Maker, a Chapel will be erected on the corner of Cape May and Sunset Cliffs in the very near future.

She is survived by three sisters of West Point, Nebraska, a niece of Battle Creek, Mich. The interment took place in Mt. Hope cemetery, her pastor Rev. C. Damschroder of Grace Lutheran church of San Diego, officiating.

Chamber Commerce Topics are Varied

A mass meeting held by the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce, Monday evening, Feb. 10, proved of extreme value as well as of interest to residents of Point Loma and the North Shore districts.

President Carl Schroder opened the meeting, after which Mr. Dumont stated that the post office takes a survey of Ocean Beach for population according to houses and residents, every year. This year, the population is over 8,000. "It is getting so now we can't go into every store in town, and say, 'Hi Bill', or 'Hello Joe', any more, proving that Ocean Beach is growing by leaps and bounds, along with its building."

F. L. Hope, representative for the Santa Fe railroad, spoke on the bus situation, stating that the company proposes to coordinate all facilities into one system for the convenience of passengers, making the rates 1½ cents per mile, thereby causing a 40 percent reduction.

"Our busses will be for the convenience and satisfaction of the public," Mr. Hope says, "and you will be able to travel to Los Angeles on the bus and come back on the train, or vice versa."

The busses cannot operate within city limits, except when taking on passengers for distant points, such as Pacific Beach and Del Mar.

The company needs a mainland franchise before promising service. Beter service can be assured if good competition is given.

Mr. Hope further stated that monopolies could not help to cut the price of city transportation and concluded his talk with the saying "a community to procure whatever it wishes, decides one way definitely."

A plan was then formulated, by which four men would be picked from the clubs of each district. They in turn would meet at different clubs each week to find out needed improvements of each community, then entail the necessary procedure to put the plan over. The clubs as a body would back them up. This body would be known by some name as the "Beach Guards."

The plan would be general between the beaches of the North Shore district, including Loma Portal and Old Town, and prevent what is known as "Politicians' Promises".

According to Al Bennett, Rep. Burnham will get the opening project of cleaning the bay, and the planning commission has completed plans for the development of the north bay and east bay, and says the plan will show definite results.

Discussion on paving the W. Pt. Loma blvd., extension was taken up, at which the argument of concrete or oil paving was mentioned. Edgar Hastings decreed a difference of four and twenty four cents against concrete. A motion was made and passed to see Mr. Rhodes about getting it on the budget.

In spite of the rain, there was a fine turnout of civic minded citizens from Ocean Beach, Mission Beach and Pacfic Beach. We should support the chamber of commerce more, and show our appreciation by giving our whole hearted attention in turning out for the meetings every second and fourth Monday of each month.

After all, there is nothing quite so discouraging as trying to use one's imagination on four blank walls.

Hero of Beach Disaster Returns to Visit Father

Fred J. Allen, who will be remembered by old residents of Ocean Beach as the youth who singlehanded brought in six persons safely to shore in the deadly riptide of 1918, and his family were visitors here last week.

Soon after leaving Ocean Beach Mr. Allen entered the government service and was sent to Miami, Florida to install dynamos in submarine chasers, later he entered the merchant marine service and in a few years became chief engineer. He made numerous trips across the Atlantic, five round trips to Chili and thirty round trips from the Gulf of Mexico to the north Atlantic ports.

Leaving the merchant marine, he entered the services of the Maryland Casualty company of Baltimore, Md., as safety engineer. In May, 1930, he won the accident reduction cup contest which was competed for by over three hundred contestants all over the United States. His score was 99.7%. This was a well-earned tribute and reflects the splendid work that has been done for the sake of humanity by Mr. Allen. In this part of the work he has attained wonderful success and while working thru the Province of Quebec, Canada, much of his success has been due to the fact that he was able to lecture to the workers in the mills and mines in either English or French. Mr. Allen has the honor of another promotion by his company in being transferred to the head office of California which is located in San Francisco.

Mr. Allen and his family arrived at the home of his father, A. J. Allen, 4871 Newport ave., on Wednesday of last week and was very busy renewing friendships and talking of the old days and their exploits. He left with his family Sunday afternoon for San Francisco to assume his new duties.

Pointers Hold Tie For Metro Lead

Overcoming one more obstacle in their march toward the championship of the Metropolitan league, the Point Loma high school basketball team defeated the Oceanside high school Pirates 26-14 last Friday at the San Diego high gym. Fighting back from the short end of a 9-8 half-time score, the Lomans finally managed to hit their stride and run up a safe lead. Isom headed Point Loma's scorers with a total of 10 points.

In the preliminary game, the Pointer Bs dropped a close game to the Pirate Bs 26-22. Behind at the half 16-9, the Pointers staged a nice comeback only to have their belated drive cut off by the final whistle.

Tonight at 7 o'clock, Point Loma's basketball quintet encounters the powerful hoopsters from Coronado high school, at Coronado Tent City. With their championship hopes growing brighter every week, the Lomans will be on their toes and eager for victory in this game, and they will be slight favorites to win. A fierce struggle is in store, however, for Coronado is only one game behind the Pointers; an upset is entirely possible.

Following are the standings of all class A teams in the Metropolitan league:

Team	Won	Lost	Pct.
Point Loma	5	0	1.000
*Escondido	5	0	1.000
*Coronado	4	1	.800
Sweetwater	4	1	.800
Oceanside	1	4	.200
Grossmont	1	4	.200
La Jolla	0	5	.000
A. & N. A.	0	5	.000

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Southerners Launch Talmadge's Presidential Boom—Kansas Offers Landon to Republicans—Bonus Bill Passed Over Roosevelt's Veto.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

TWO THOUSAND or more "grass root" Democrats, representing 17 southern and border states—though most of them were Georgians—assembled in Macon, Ga., and with wild yells launched the boom of Gov. Eugene Talmadge for the Democratic Presidential nomination. They adopted a motion asking him to run as a constitutional Democrat who is opposing what they called the "theorists, crackpots, brain trusters and professors" of the New Deal. Talmadge, though highly elated, declined to comment or to make any announcement at the time.

Gov. Talmadge

The platform adopted by the meeting called for preservation of the Constitution, of state sovereignty and of the American form of government. It accused President Roosevelt of abandoning faith in the Constitution and the doctrines of Thomas Jefferson and of "repudiating, abandoning, and sidetracking" the platform on which he was elected in 1932. It said:

"We do not regard the occupant of the White House as a Democrat.

"He has broken the pledge of our party and violated the platform of 1932.

"We here today affirm our faith in that doctrine."

It is not easy yet to estimate the possible results of the Talmadge movement. The administration leaders refuse to take the Georgia governor seriously or to admit that he can imperil their control of any of the southern states.

The situation in the South is further complicated by the sudden death of Gov. O. K. Allen of Louisiana. He was the devoted and complaisant adherent of Huey Long and had been selected to fill out the unexpired term of the late senator. Lieutenant Governor Noe succeeded to the governorship, but who will now be the leader of the Long forces was not immediately determined.

WHAT is known as the Bankhead-Jones bill for soil conservation, the administration's substitute for the AAA, was given the hesitant approval of the senate agricultural committee by a vote of 15 to 2, although Chairman Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina said he "personally had some doubts" as to its constitutionality. The measure would enable the secretary of agriculture to remove 30,000,000 acres from cultivation and give him even wider powers than he had under the AAA. It was evidently headed for a hot debate on the senate floor.

Secretary Wallace let it be known that officials of the Agriculture, Treasury and Justice departments were cooperating in an effort to collect for the government the $200,000,000 ordered returned to processors by the Supreme court, but he gave no details of the plan. In referring to this court order in a radio talk, Mr. Wallace went farther in criticism of the Supreme court than has any other official of the administration. He declared it was "the most gigantic legalized steal in history." Representative Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts asserted on the floor of the house that "any official who will make a statement of that nature about the Supreme court ought to be impeached." Mr. Wallace may not have heard the last of this.

KANSAS Republican state committee members, the Kansas Day club and many party leaders from the Missouri valley region, celebrating Founders' day in Topeka, presented to the country Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas as their choice for the Republican Presidential nomination. In a speech to the banqueters the governor told what he hoped to do for the nation if he were nominated and elected. Refraining from "substituting epithets for arguments," he offered a program for ending federal extravagance and restoring prosperity.

Gov. Landon

Replying to the query "What would you do?" Mr. Landon proposed relief for agriculture through a soil conservation program with the honest purpose of saving the fertility of American farms and not merely that of providing a blind for further dispensation of AAA checks.

The governor pledged himself to old age pensions. He recommended extension and improvement of civil service, and the utilization by the federal government of specially trained minds as he has used them in Kansas—"to collect facts, not to administer theories."

His own best recommendation of himself he gave in three succinct paragraphs summarizing his budget balancing achievements.

PAYMENT of the veterans' bonus by means of baby bonds payable on demand was enacted into law by congress, and the money for the ex-soldiers may be available on July 1. The Harrison compromise bonus bill that went through the senate and house easily, was vetoed by President Roosevelt. The house immediately and enthusiastically repassed the measure. The senate was a little more deliberate, but within three days it, too, had overridden the disapproval of the Chief Executive, and the bill was made law. The vote in the senate was 76 to 19. In the house it had been 324 to 61.

It was a notable fact that all the senators—95 in number, for Huey Long's successor has not yet taken his seat—were present and voting. Notable, but not strange when one remembers this is an election year. Fifty-seven Democrats, 16 Republicans and 3 Radicals—La Follette of Wisconsin, Shipstead and Benson of Minnesota—voted for the bill, while 12 Democrats and 7 Republicans voted against it.

The galleries were filled and there was wild cheering when the vote was announced. Republican senators amused themselves and the spectators by twitting the Democrats on their failure to stand by their chief, the most voluble of the twitters being Senator Hastings of Delaware.

Informed of the vote, President Roosevelt at once ordered government departments to prepare for payment of the bonus certificates as quickly as accuracy will permit. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said that the payment would be the most difficult mechanical task the treasury had faced in its history. He said the treasury would need $2,500,000 and the veterans' administration $5,000,000 to increase the force to take care of the job. More than seven million interest calculations will be necessary.

"WE CAN either take on the mantle of hypocrisy, or we can take a walk; and we'll probably do the latter."

Al Smith

These words of Alfred E. Smith in his speech at the American Liberty league dinner in Washington were perhaps the most interesting and significant of his utterances on that occasion, for he professed to be speaking for "the disciples of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland" and concerning their action in the Democratic national convention next June when the delegates are asked to indorse the doings of the Roosevelt administration. There could be no misunderstanding Smith's meaning, and he must now be considered the leader of the conservative Democrats in their revolt against the policies of the New Dealers. The concern of the administration Democrats is now as to how extensive will be the bolt; and whether the conservatives will put up their own ticket, support the Republican nominee or merely stay away from the polls. Of course in any case the Republican cause will be aided materially, unless the guesses of its leaders are all wrong.

New Deal Democrats were quite undismayed by the Smith speech, which they declared was weak and ineffective. They announced that Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of the senate would deliver the official reply in a radio address.

Mr. Smith in his Liberty league speech never once named President Roosevelt but he specifically put on that gentleman the full blame for repudiation of most of the planks in the Democratic platform of 1932, which he declared was the best ever put forth in this country.

Senator Robinson's reply to Al Smith's speech consisted in the main of quotations from previous utterances by Smith in which he advocated a course quite as radical as that pursued by the New Dealers in combating the depression. He jeered at the New Yorker for abandoning the streets of the west side for the palaces of Park avenue and trading his brown derby for a silk topper, and denounced him as a deserter in the face of the enemy.

ACTIVITIES of the Townsend old age pension advocates are proving most annoying to many congressmen, and it is likely they will be investigated. A resolution for such an inquiry was introduced by Representative Jasper Bell of Missouri, Democrat. It charged that for several years "individuals and groups" have "conceived and promoted numerous schemes under the pretext of obtaining pensions for the aged and needy" and that now "several groups of fraudulent promoters are enriching themselves by working the so-called pension plan racket."

IF PLANS announced in St. Louis by leaders of world Jewry are carried out, there is to be another exodus, this time from Germany where the Jews are greatly oppressed by the Hitlerites. Sir Herbert Samuel, eminent British Jew, attending the national council of Jewish federations and welfare funds, said a definite method would be formulated soon to provide for the gradual emigration of at least 100,000 of the German reich's estimated 430,000 Jewish population. The undertaking will be financed by a fund of about $15,000,000 raised by English and American Jews.

WASHINGTON wants to know who ordered the United States Marine band to walk out at the women's patriotic conference on national defense. Probably it was Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt, but he would say nothing, so a resolution was introduced in congress demanding an investigation.

The difficulties arose out of a speech before the women's conference by Bainbridge Colby, a Democrat who said unkind things about the New Deal. Thereupon the band walked out, and certain navy officers refused to deliver scheduled speeches before the conference. The Republicans did not overlook the opportunities offered by the incident.

NOTEWORTHY among recent deaths is that of George W. Wickersham of New York, who was attorney general of the United States in the Taft administration and for many years one of the country's leading corporation lawyers. He was seventy-seven years old, and died of heart disease in a taxicab.

Mr. Wickersham was chairman of the famous Hoover commission named to investigate prohibition and other law enforcement in 1929. The commission's report opposed repeal, but the document was accompanied by the members' individual statements in which a majority urged repeal or modification of the eighteenth amendment. The net result was confusing.

Much good work, overlooked by the public in the controversy over prohibition, nevertheless was done by the commission. Its exhaustive reports, filed early in 1931, covered many phases of the crime problem and were regarded as important contributions in that field.

DR. HUGH S. CUMMING announced that on February 1 he would retire as surgeon general of the United States public health service, "because of long service and health that isn't too good." He has been in the service since 1894 and has had four terms as its head. His administration is credited with completion of the quarantine system; inauguration of preimmigration examinations at American consulates; establishment of a national leprosarium and national narcotic farms, and construction of eight marine hospitals.

It was believed in Washington that President Roosevelt would appoint as the new surgeon general Dr. Thomas H. Parran, Jr., state health commissioner of New York and assistant surgeon general on leave.

A JURY in the United States District court in New York returned verdicts of guilty against acting Capt. William F. Warms and three co-defendants in the criminal negligence trial resulting from the disastrous fire that swept the Morro Castle off Asbury Park, September 8, 1934, taking a toll of 134 lives.

Besides Warms, those convicted were Eben Starr Abbott, chief engineer of the burned ship; Henry E. Cabaud, executive vice president of the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship company, operators of the Ward Line, and the New York & Cuba company itself.

FRANCE'S new government, under Albert Sarraut as premier, it is hoped will stand up until the spring elections. If it does, the results will not be happy for Italy for it will take a much stronger stand in support of the League of Nations than did that of Laval. The new foreign minister is Pierre-Etienne Flandin, noted for his pro-British tendencies; and Joseph Paul-Boncour, no friend of Mussolini, is the minister of state concerned chiefly with league affairs. In other respects there is nothing especially notable about the Sarraut cabinet. Regnier is retained as finance minister, and he is committed to the Laval policy of defending the franc.

Albert Sarraut

Flandin went to London for the funeral of King George, and it is rumored in Paris that he would sound out British bankers on the subject of a loan of three billion francs which the French treasury sorely needs. With Laval in the discard, the British might look on this suggestion with favor.

ADOLF HITLER has just completed three years as the ruler of Germany, and the anniversary was celebrated by the Nazis with triumphant rejoicing. Addressing 26,000 Nazi storm troop veterans, the reichsfuehrer declared:

"Whoever opposes us now does it not because we are Nazis, but because we restored military independence to Germany."

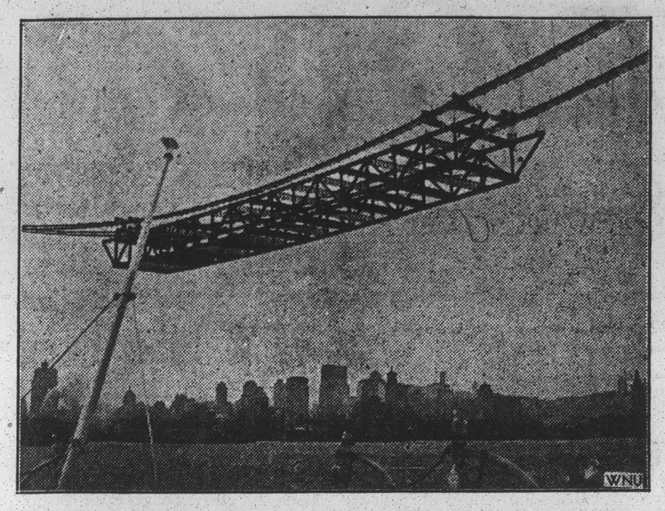
Hitler spoke 25 minutes, claiming the Nazi movement has brought unity to the nation and adding:

"We seek peace because we love it, but we insist on our honor because we do not live without it."

MAJOR reductions in naval tonnage are "out" so far as the London four-power conference is concerned, owing to the unsettled condition of world affairs and the defection of Japan. However the parley made some progress toward an agreement on the sizes of ships and calibers of guns when the Americans, French, and Italians accepted a new British compromise plan as a basis for discussion.

The plan proposes battleships with a maximum of 35,000 tons, the existing limits; 14 inch guns instead of the present 16 inch ones, which would be eliminated; and an entirely separate category for destroyers, placing them in a classification with small cruisers.

BAY BRIDGE IN NEW "WORLD'S FIRST"



This is the first bridge span ever known to have been hung out in the middle of the suspension cables. This 540-foot section of the decks of the 4½ mile San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge was hoisted in nine sections up to the steel wire cables and hung there from suspender ropes looped over the two main cables. Heretofore suspension bridges have employed traveler cranes building out from the towers toward the middle. On the bay bridge, the engineers hung the first portions of bridge deck out in the middle of the 2310-foot suspension span and added to this steel at both ends, working back towards the towers that support the cables. The engines to hoist these sections of truss span are located at the base of the towers, not visible in the picture, a quarter mile away in either direction.

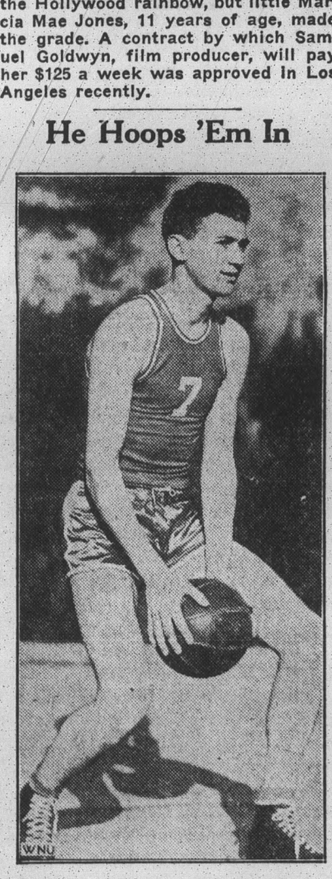
Starlet

Few discover the gold at the end of the Hollywood rainbow, but little Marcia Mae Jones, 11 years of age, made the grade. A contract by which Samuel Goldwyn, film producer, will pay her $125 a week was approved in Los Angeles recently.

She's Commodore

Miss Jane Pond has been selected as honorary commodore of the 10th annual national mid-winter sailing regatta held off L. A. harbor February 12 to 16. Sponsored by the Civic Regatta Association of Southern California and the Southern California Yachting Association, the races will include all types of racing craft.

He Hoops 'Em In



Basket shooting reached new heights in the Pacific Coast conference this year when Hank Luisetti, Stanford sophomore, started burning up the courts. In 14 games he has goaled 217 points, a new Coast conference record. He set a sensational record by scoring 30 points against University of Southern California in the second half of a game. Luisetti is rated a perfectly balanced player, and is said to be as good a guard as he is a forward.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE HUNTING SEASON ENDS

THE very worst things come to an end at last. No matter how bad a thing is, it cannot last forever. So it was with the hunting season for Lightfoot the Deer. There came a day when the law once more protected all deer, a day when the hunters could no longer go searching for Lightfoot.

Usually there was great rejoicing among the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows when the hunting season ended and they knew that Lightfoot would be in no more danger until the next hunting season. But this year there was no rejoicing. You see, no one could find Lightfoot. The last seen of him was when he was running for his life with two hounds baying on his trail and the Green Forest filled with hunters watching for a chance to shoot him.

"I Tell You What It is," Said Sammy Jay to Bobby Coon, "Something Has Happened to Lightfoot."

Sammy Jay had hunted everywhere through the Green Forest. Blacky the Crow, whose eyes are quite as sharp as those of Sammy Jay, had joined in the search. They had found no trace of Lightfoot. Paddy the Beaver said that for three days Lightfoot had not visited his pond for a drink. Billy Mink, who travels up and down the Laughing Brook, had looked for Lightfoot's footprints in the soft earth along the banks and had found only old ones. Jumper the Hare had visited Lightfoot's favorite eating places at night, but Lightfoot had not been in any of them.

"I tell you what it is," said Sammy Jay to Bobby Coon, "something has happened to Lightfoot. Either those hounds caught him and killed him or he was shot by one of those hunters. The Green Forest will never be the same without him. I don't think I shall want to come over here very much. There isn't one of all the other people who live in the Green Forest who would be missed as Lightfoot will be."

Bobby Coon nodded. "That's true, Sammy," said he. "Without Lightfoot the Green Forest will never be the same. He never harmed anybody. Why those hunters should have been so anxious to kill one so beautiful is something I cannot understand. For that matter, I don't understand why they want to kill any of us. If they really needed us for food it would be a different matter, but they don't. Have you been up in the Old Pasture and asked Old Man Coyote if he has seen anything of Lightfoot?"

Sammy nodded. "I've been up there twice," said he. "Old Man Coyote has been lying very low during the days, but nights he has done a lot of traveling. You know, Old Man Coyote has a mighty good nose, but not once since the day those hounds chased Lightfoot has he found so much as a tiny whiff of Lightfoot's scent. I thought he might have found the place where Lightfoot was killed, but he hasn't, although he has looked for it. Well, the hunting season for Lightfoot is over, but I am afraid it has ended too late."

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

USING LEFTOVERS

PERHAPS a glance at what other cooks have done with the leftovers of feasts will help to use those that are daily problems in most homes. Chicken is the one meat that is not hard to serve in left-over dishes. A cupful will make a delightful salad mixed with tender celery, and less than a cupful, mixed with crumbs and seasoning, will stuff tomatoes or peppers. The following is a good recipe to keep on hand:

Stuffed Peppers.

Slice from the stem end of each pepper, making a cup, removing the seeds and white fiber. Parboil the peppers in boiling water five minutes, then drain and chill. For six peppers use the following: Two tablespoonfuls of minced onion cooked in three tablespoonfuls of oil, add one and one-half cupfuls of bread crumbs and one-fourth of a cupful of minced chicken. Season with salt and pepper and add one-half cupful of stock. Mix well, stuff the peppers, place them in a little water in gem pans to bake. Cover the tops with buttered crumbs and when they are well browned the peppers will be ready to serve.

White Sauce That's Different.

Take one and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn oil, one tablespoonful of minced onion, cook until yellow, add one tablespoonful of cornstarch, half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a cupful of milk. Cook until smooth and thick and serve with any leftover vegetable.

Creamed Chicken.

Take two tablespoonfuls of olive oil or any vegetable oil, add a tablespoonful of minced onion, cook three minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, stir until well blended, then add one and one-half cupfuls of top milk or thin cream, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg, a dash of cayenne and paprika. Add two cupfuls of minced chicken. Serve on toast or in bread cases. A dash of currant jelly is an improvement.

ROLY POLY GOLF BALL

THIS is a dinner table trick that will startle all who witness it. The feat is performed with an ordinary golf ball, which the magician places on the table.

Making mysterious passes, he causes the ball to roll along the tablecloth, traveling in a most uncanny fashion. Anyone may lift the ball and examine it.

The motive power is furnished by a strong thread that runs beneath the tablecloth. On the end of the thread is a small metal ring, which the tablecloth hides. It is upon this hidden ring that the wizard places the golf ball.

While his right hand makes its mystic passes, the magician uses his left to draw the thread, which makes the ball roll in a most natural fashion. The trick is made most effective by having a confederate pull the thread from the opposite side of the table. In this case the ball will roll away from the magician.

The Luxury of Crime

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE taxbill's here (it comes each year along about this time).
A bill for what? Well, quite a lot will go to pay for crime.
No goods we take, no laws we break,
no evil path pursue,
We tote no guns—we're jost the ones who pay for those who do.
We need no bail, police or jail, no
courthouse on the square
Where men are tried, but those outside must pay for people there.
In cells they sit and do their bit and think it quite a chore,
And put away three meals a day that we are paying for.

We're just the great (in ev'ry state)
majority of men
Who day and night live fairly right, without police or pen.
We need no laws or courts, because we never climb a wall—
We could go on from dawn to dawn
without a law at all.
In mills we toil, or plow the soil, a living try to win,
Give little time to thoughts of crime
—and then the bill comes in.
I sometimes think that those who wink at crime have failed to see,
To folks like us who labor thus, it's just a luxury.

Watch Your Posture; Has Vast Influence in Health

"How you feel, how much you get out of life and how long you live depends to a surprising degree on the proper functioning of your vital organs, and their health is largely controlled by your posture—at any rate, improper posture will crowd or displace organs and interfere with functional efficiency. Many mysterious ailments are traceable to this, says Rex Beach in Cosmopolitan. He passes on these tips regarding posture from Dr. Stanley Green, who has worker them out according to the principles of "body mechanics":

Don't sit on the feet. It twists the pelvis, and may eventually produce a postural spinal curve. Sit with the weight on base of pelvis, leaning forward from the hips, knees not crossed, head up.

At the office, don't slump with weight on base of spine, or middle of back or with feet elevated. It crowds the heart and lungs, compresses the vertebrae, and may cause eye strain, headache, neuritis, lame back and other ills. Sit well back in chair, weight on the buttocks, head up. If necessary to bend forward, bend at hips—not at neck or waist. Standing with weight on one leg causes a pelvic twist, spinal curvature, and flattening of the arch. Stand with weight on both legs, head erect, feet parallel or slightly turned out.

Toy Railroading Is Rapid Growing Hobby Among Men

Playing with toy railroads is today one of the fastest growing hobbies among men in the United States.

Nearly every large city has its miniature railroad society whose members own elaborate systems ranging in cost from about $30 for small electric lines to $10,000 for real models which run under their own steam over a mile of track, hauling ten tons at 30 miles an hour.—Collier's.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

A Grave Mistake for a Mother to Make

GIVING CHILD UNKNOWN REMEDIES WITHOUT ASKING DOCTOR FIRST

GIVING your child a medicine or remedy you don't know all about — without asking your family doctor first — is a bad risk for any mother to take.

Doctors and child authorities say health, and sometimes life itself, depends on this.

So — when you're offered a "bargain" in a remedy for your child; ask your doctor before you buy it. Do this for your child's sake and your own peace of mind.

Ask him particularly about the frequently used "milk of magnesia" — about Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. He will tell you that for over 60 years physicians have endorsed it as SAFE for your child. The kind of remedy you want your child to have.

Remember this when you buy, and say "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" to your druggist. Comes now, also, in tablets that taste of peppermint, that children like to take.

Safety for You and Yours

NOW, ALSO IN TABLET FORM

You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children — and in the interest of the public in general.

"HONEST ABE"

There will never be another Abraham Lincoln. His honesty and up-right integrity stand out greater today on his 127th birthday anniversary than two decades ago; the lessons of his simplicity in life and practical honest principles he practiced by word and deed grow more sacred in the minds and hearts of everyone. Lincoln great in his desire to aid his fellowmen, loved service and sought it diligently in all his dealings. This great generous-hearted soul was very meager in appearance; he was comely and had no great beauty in countenance or dress, but his beautiful heart and soul made him a "Prince of Peace" among men.

The Civil War was the most regretable circumstance of his life, and its load of responsibility was more heavy than the average could have borne. Lincoln donned the army armor reluctantly for his country. This bloody fray grieved him beyond human expression and when the National Cemetery was dedicated to the dead soldiers, his Gettysburg address, the most famous utterance toward humankind, was delivered; heart-felt and full of profound sorrow he stood calm in tears and sympathy. This immortal classic is among America's greatest parchments.

Abraham Lincoln was one of America's most honored presidents; he ranks with George Washington, and lives in the memory of his people. His struggle for education was accomplished from a half dozen musty old books, but he had them "by heart". Lincoln could quote Blackstone and soon graduated from "Brush College".

At the convention which nominated him for president in 1860, he was laughed at by many who were amused over his dress, others criticised his speech; but when he was elected President, he soon showed his mettle, to the Nation's sheer surprise. He had the qualification for office and the commanding ability to "stand by his guns". In the midst of trying service for his country, this leader and apostle of truth and peace, fell from the bullet of an assassin. This was the sorest tragedy for a nation enveloped in a cruel war. The country's hope was in the balance; but Lincoln had left his shining mark behind him, and it was only necessary to recall his words and purposes, to gain added courage. To one of his critics when alive, who thought he was prosecuting the war too vigorously, he exploded, "How would you have me conduct it; with squirt guns loaded with rose water?"

Lincoln wanted a second term to finish the "big job" he had begun. He was re-elected; he was martyred! The only way to save his country, it seemed, was to die for it! The Country was saved; God reigns, and the government at Washington still lives."

California is now known as the white spot of the nation, and Southern California is conceded to be the white spot of the Golden State. This could still be carried further by naming valleys which are the white spot of the Southland. Nothing compares with this truly remarkable year-round climate and low humidity which makes for comfort summer and winter. This may be why the expectation of life is steadily increasing on the upward grade of longivity. It is also true that there is a gradual enlightenment of the people in such matters of hygiene and living comforts; all because of the high value placed on the privilege of living in such a magnificent land of wealth and ideal conditions.

C.C.C. Does Worthwhile Work at Cuyamaca

The Civilian Conservation Corps camp which was moved from Cuyamaca Rancho State Park in San Diego county recently had worked there two years, protected that California park's timber, land and wild life and equipped it with substantial and useful outdoor recreational facilities, Conrad Wirth, assistant director of the National Park Service, announced.

During the four six-months period the 200-man company worked at Cuyamaca Rancho under joint supervision of the National Park Service and the California park authorities, it constructed one foot bridge, two vehicle bridges, one bathhouse, one combination building, six equipment houses, one garage, four latrines, two shelters, five miscellaneous camp buildings, 2,520 rods of fences, one incinerator, 11.6 miles of telephone lines, 21,520 feet of pipe lines, three small reservoirs, a 3,700 gallon water supply system, 57 outdoor fireplaces, one cattle guard, one entrance portal, 14 table and bench combinations, 31 miscellaneous structural improvements, 17 miles of truck trails, 2.4 miles of park roads and .8 mile of foot trails.

These men also treated 95 acres for gully correction by making 30,526 square yards of bank sloping, cleared 735 yards of stream channels, improved the forest stand in 239 acres, spent 42 man-days on nurseries, collected 15 bushels of coniferous tree seeds, gave 3,325 man-days to fighting forest fires, constructed 1.1 miles of fire breaks, reduced the fire hazard along 14.5 miles of roadside, 8.3 miles of trailside and in 110 acres, devoted 270 man-days to fire presuppression, controlled tree insect pests in 7,065 acres, landscaped seven acres, developed 25 acres for public camp ground purposes, collected three pounds of grass and flower seeds, developed .2 mile of streams, regulated insect pests in 3,485 acres, marked 30 miles of boundaries, spent 425 man-days in the preparation and transportation of materials, did rodent control work in 540 acres, made a lineal survey of 78.8 miles and a topographic survey of 150 acres.

"In the CCC enrollment reduction, which caused the removal of the camp at Cuyamaca Rancho and others throughout the country," explained Mr. Wirth,

"National Park Service and ECW officials make very effort to cooperate with state and local authorities in the removal of camps from areas which have received their present shares of development or to which some sort of labor may be able to return at a later date. The cooperation we receive in California is a source of much satisfaction and pleasure."

The CCC camp at Cuyamaca Rancho was one of a nation-wide system operating under the direction of Robert Fechner, director of Emergency Conservation work.

Frank Knox Public Citizen

Services to Nation Make Him a Presidential Possibility.

Oftentimes the people of this country refer to the government of the United States as "the biggest business in the world." It is—increasingly so since the World war. Practically every issue of consequence affecting the welfare of the nation since 1920 has been either economic or financial in character. One has only to recall the legislation, mandates and dictum coming from Washington during the past two years to realize to what extent the government has entered into the daily lives and business of all people.

And yet—up to this time—the people of the United States have relied on office holders of reputation, politicians or military heroes to administer the office of President. They have never elected a business man to run the business of the United States.

In Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher, the Republicans of Illinois who have unanimously made him their "favorite son" candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States this year, have sought to fill this aching void. They know Knox is a budget balancer and a business builder, as his continuous success in business attests. They know he knows how to meet a payroll and has never had trouble with his employees, union or otherwise. They know he practices thrift and that his progress in life from a newsboy to the head of one of the largest metropolitan newspapers in the country has been achieved on savings, character and ability alone.

But Knox's scope is not merely that of making a success of his own business. As a newspaper editor he has, to use his own words, been "administering a public trust."

As a result, upon Frank Knox has been conferred the title of "public citizen." While never an office holder he has, nevertheless, been a student of and a contributor to government all his life. Backed by his newspaper he has helped elect good men to office and to defeat bad ones. He has been "backstage" on many public policies, national, state and local, for which the office holders got all the credit. Always on the progressive and liberal side of any issue, he has fought hard for fairness and equality for the farmer, for labor, for racial and religious groups suffering from discrimination, and for individuals who stood for good principles with clean hands. Upon all the issues now before the American people he is one of the best informed.

Knox was a child of depression. He came to manhood in depression. He learned in other depressions of lesser magnitude a few fundamentals of success; pay your debts; never spend more than you can earn; don't make promises you can't keep; and keep the promises you make. One executive who worked with him in a vast newspaper enterprise, said of his attitude toward these simple rules: "He never forgot an order; he never passed the buck." And that about sums it up.

He was born in Boston in 1874 when his country was doing a bad job recovering from the panic of 1873. His parents, sound Scotch-English folks, like their forebears when confronted with an insurmountable obstacle, moved to Grand Rapids, Mich., when Frank was six years of age. At 11 years of age Knox was delivering newspapers for $3.75 a week. This was not enough to help the family. At 15 years of age he quit school to go to work and soon became a traveling salesman at $15 a week. The depression of 1893 cost him his job. At the urging of friends, including his pastor, he went to Alma college, Alma, Mich., and worked his way through doing any job that came to hand. There he met his future wife, Annie Reid.

Two months before graduation the Spanish-American war broke out. Knox enlisted as a private and took twenty of his college mates into the army with him. While on leave attending the funeral of a relative, the Michigan regiment was filled up and Knox arrived in Tampa, Fla., in uniform but without definite assignment to any outfit. There he met Lieut. David M. Goodrich, former Harvard oarsman, who introduced him to Theodore Roosevelt. The colonel looked him over carefully, asked him if he would care to join the Rough Riders and personally administered the oath of a soldier to Knox. He served at Roosevelt's side throughout the campaign which ended at San Juan hill, finally to fall a victim to the heat and tropical ailments.

Trooper Knox returned to Grand Rapids to find himself face to face with the newspaper business. During his absence, many of his letters to the mother, setting forth the lighter side of the Cuban campaign, had been published in the local newspapers.

"You have a nose for news. I'll put you on at $10 a week," said one of the editors.

Thus Frank Knox found the profession which was to be his life work. On his meager salary, he married Annie Reid, "the girl he left behind him" when he marched off to war. In three years he became city editor and circulation manager of the paper. Then, with $500 as capital, another thousand of borrowed money, and a partner, John A. Muehling, with a like amount, he bought the Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., News.

In ten years on that job Knox "cleaned" up one of the toughest towns in the country, helped nominate and elect Chase Osborn, one of the first of the old progressive Republicans, as governor of Michigan, and himself became chairman of the Republican state committee. In 1912 Frank Knox supported his old commander, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, for President. At the conclusion of that campaign he sold his Michigan paper at a handsome profit and, prompted by the urging of Gov. Robert Bass, another progressive governor, with his old partner Muehling he bought the Manchester, N. H., Leader. This he combined with another local paper, and, together, they still own and operate the Union-Leader, two of the progressive newspapers of New England.

Always constructive, always looking for some way in which to make things better, Publisher Knox became aware of the difficulties in which agriculture and industry were finding themselves in the New England states. It was his idea that, to protect their interests, these states should act as a unit and to that end he took a leading part in forming the New England Council, one of the country's outstanding examples of co-operation by a large group. It has survived economic stress and successfully fought off dictatorship from Washington.

Over-age for the draft, able to command influence if he wanted an officer's commission or a softer berth, Frank Knox enlisted as a "buck private" in the New Hampshire militia in 1917 when the United States became involved in the World War. No militarist, but a profound patriot when his country needed men, Knox, qualified by his previous service in Cuba, quickly found himself in an officer's training camp over his protest. He served throughout the war with the artillery train of the 78th division, participating in the St. Mihiel and Argonne campaigns. He came home this time with his hearing slightly impaired, although it was believed for weeks that an unexpected discharge of artillery had deafened him for life. The first day home he reported for work in a long-tailed coat, all he had saved from his "civvies" before going to war a second time.

Knox's success in New Hampshire attracted the attention of Publisher William Randolph Hearst. When invited by Mr. Hearst to take charge of his Boston papers, Knox, who was in no sense a candidate for the job, fixed what he regarded as a prohibitive price on his services. To his astonishment, Mr. Hearst agreed and Knox ran the papers for a year with such success that he was tendered the general managership of the entire Hearst chain of papers. In that job Knox applied the same general rules of budget balancing and editorial integrity which he had followed all his life.

Once again, Knox found himself traveling the length and breadth of the land, acquiring and applying a knowledge of local affairs, sectional interests and meeting the leading business men, statesmen and politicians everywhere. When he retired from this post in 1928 he expected to settle down in Manchester with his wife in a new home especially adapted in design and site to a troublesome throat ailment from which Mrs. Knox had suffered for several years. But Knox found he was not the kind of a man who can retire until the last horn is blown.

In 1929 Walter A. Strong, publisher of The Chicago Daily News, suddenly died. The newspaper was an institution in the city of Chicago, devoted to the public service, independent, read and believed in by the citizens of that city. Under Victor F. Lawson and Strong the paper had set a standard for American journalism for more than fifty years.

Knox, without enough money of his own to buy such an expensive property, came into the picture with Theodore T. Ellis, a successful manufacturer of press accessories. Theirs was not the highest bid. It was sold to them after the executors and directors had canvassed the country for a man of character eligible to conduct a newspaper on the high standards it had acquired. The principal editors and publishers of the country individually assured all inquirers that in Knox the right man for the job had been found.

Knox has run The Chicago Daily News on the same principles that made him successful at the Soo and in Manchester. He has stood manfully behind the forces of law and order which has brought the underworld in Chicago to its knees—the same old fight he fought at Sault Ste. Marie in his earlier days. His campaign for a new political conscience, in which courage and common honesty stand out as its chief characteristics, is showing results. He has improved the financial position of his newspaper, retiring in the first four years, over $4,000,000 in bonds and preferred stock. This, too, is a throwback on his life-long ability to balance budgets, save money and, at the same time, give quality service.

He has continuously fought the "New Deal" as contrary to some of the things he found to be fundamental American principles: You pay your debts; you don't spend more than you earn; you make no promises you cannot keep; you keep the promises you make, and you tell the truth unsparingly about things as they are.

Illinois Republicans agree with Knox and believe in him. They think he is the type best suited to present day needs—a business man with a statesman's viewpoint and experience; a fresh, up-to-date "public citizen" fully qualified to apply the homely virtues and fundamentals to modern conditions.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"Webs of Destiny" is the title of the forum-lecture to be given by W. Emmett Small at 3 o'clock, Sunday, at Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, making the third of a series of lectures on the general subject of "The Esoteric Tradition."

Small, who is associate editor of the Theosophical forum, will show how intricate is t he pattern of our destiny which we ourselves weave. Numberless are the beings expressing their wills in life. Our individual webs of destiny therefore do not stand alone; they intertwine, interlock. This is the origin of all the imperfection as well as all the beauty, order and law in the universe. But how much of this is fate? Are we doomed to a predestined end? Have we no free will? Are we puppets that dance at the will of some invisible Creator? Or on the other hand are we totally independent of the universe, and can we express our free will without any restraint? Is this a universe of chance or of law and order? Do we suffer experiences fortuitously, or are they the results of our own making? These and other questions will be clarified by Small who at the close of his address will be assisted in meeting the questions of the audience by Mrs. Frances M. Dadd.

SAFEWAY STORES BOOST CITRUS FRUIT GROWERS

An intensive week-long Farmer-Consumer sales campaign to stimulate the consumption of citrus fruits—one of California's major industries—will be inaugurated by Safeway Stores, February 14, Mr. Milton Heller, divisional manager of Safeway Stores, at San Diego, announced today.

The special drive to boost consumption of citrus products is in line with Safeway's belief that the best form of farm relief lies in waging aggressive sales campaigns on behalf of agriculture, he said.

"We believe quite emphatically that the best possible assistance we can render the farmer is to encourage a wider consumption of his products by distributing them without unnecessary waste in between the producer and consumer," Mr. Heller continued.

"Safeway's plan of distribution enables us to stimulate consumption and to give the farmer the larger portion of what the consumer pays for commodities."

In this latest Farmer-Consumer campaign, Safeway will receive the cooperation of the California Fruit Growers Exchange in getting the best possible fruits for distribution, in addition to special material for newspaper advertising.

"Safeway's Homemakers' bureau PO Box 660 Oakland, Cal. will supply to all housewives special recipes on the use of citrus fruits as part of the campaign. In addition to the Safeway MacMarr stores, all other units of the company will join in helping us boost consumption of all varieties of citrus commodities," Mr. Heller concluded.

Scout Troop 28 Holds Reunion

The twenty-sixth anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America was celebrated by troop 28 when they held a reunion of all its former members and present members. The celebration took place Friday, Feb. 7, when 32 present members and 36 former members and their parents were in attendance.

C. Boone Sadler, retiring scoutmaster, turned the troop over to A. J. Hall, who will be the scoutmaster for the ensuing year.

The highlight of the evening came when William Tomkins, national commissioner of Boy Scouts and a recognized authority on Indian sign language, made his appearance in his picturesque and authentic Indian costume. Very few of the 100 boys and parents present knew that Mr. Tomkins was going to be there so his appearance came as a pleasant surprise to everyone.

"WON'T YOU BE MY - - - - ?"

TWO hearts, one dart—they have come down the ages to say Won't-You-Be-My-Valentine and to remind us that in an age which bristles with dollar-signs and flaunts sophistication, Romance is not dead.

Then why not give a Valentine party with all of the fol-de-rols which are supposed to be old-fashioned and which your guests will gloat over? Herald the event with a lacey valentine. If your shops are too modern to carry them, make the invitations by pasting paper lace on the edge of a red cardboard heart with two hearts and a dart drawn in the center. Place your initials in one heart and the initial of your guest in the other heart, and write underneath.

Guess Who Is Inviting You To a Valentine Supper

For a contest game, give the guests bows and arrows to shoot at a heart target. The winner should be presented with a heart-shaped box filled with heart-shaped nut cookies, and each loser who failed to hit the target might be consoled by being allowed to kiss one person for each arrow that went astray.

A Supper That's a "Honey"

Set the Valentine supper table with a lace cloth, red candles and a red heart-shaped box of candy at each place. And here is the supper menu with tested recipes:

Chicken and Ham Shortcake
Cranberry Jelly cut in Heart Shapes
Grapefruit Cream Sherbet with Cherry Garnish
Cocoanut Kisses Coffee
Fairy Gingerbread

Chicken and Ham Shortcake: Make a white sauce of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups milk and the contents of two 6-ounce cans of evaporated milk. Add one slightly-beaten egg yolk. Then add the contents of one 12-ounce can of chicken which has been diced, one cup of diced cold boiled ham and two tablespoons diced pimiento. Add two tablespoons cooking sherry and season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve between and on top of split, hot baking powder biscuits which have been buttered. This serves eight persons.

Grapefruit Cream Sherbet: Soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons of cold water. Dissolve in grapefruit juice from a No. 2 can which has been brought to boiling. Add one and one-third cups sugar. Dissolve and cool. Add three tablespoons lemon juice and one well-beaten egg. Pour the cold fruit juice mixture slowly into one cup cream and freeze at once in refrigerator trays or in an ice-cream freezer. Stir often if you use the refrigerator. Serve garnished with chopped cherries. This serves eight persons.*

POULTRY HELPS.

By E. E. Steele.

Rose chafers are extremely poisonous to chickens under 10 weeks old. When these beetles are on vegetation chickens devour them readily and only a few are necessary to cause death.

Signs of poisoning may appear as early as one hour after feeding on chafers and death may follow in one hour after the appearance of symptoms. If sufficient poison is not obsorbed to cause death, the bird recovers.

The affected chicken becomes drowsy shows weakness of the legs and falls over on its side. There may be convulsions. Sharp cries are frequently emitted, and the head and neck are retracted over the back of the bird. The only internal sign is rose chafers in the crop.

The rapid action of the poison renders treatment futile in birds showing symptoms.

A "Death Ray" which will melt steel at a distance of 20 feet will be at the California Pacific International Exposition.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms, "Unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul. Shew me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths."

One of the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon contains these passages from Luke: "And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the Holy One of God. And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, he came out of him, and hurt him not."

The Lesson-Sermon includes also these words from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Knowing that Soul and its attributes were forever manifested through man, the Master healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, feet to lame, thus bringing to light the scientific action of the divine Mind on human minds and bodies and giving a better understanding of Soul and salvation."

SYNOPSIS

John Spencer and his cousin, Geoffrey Bohun, are vacationing in Austria. Geoffrey is a gifted portrait painter but prefers to paint landscapes. While strolling in the forest, John hears English voices, and decides to investigate. From safe cover he finds four men burying a man in green livery who, evidently, had been murdered. Pharaoh is the leader of the gang; the others are Dewdrop, Rush and Bugle. Unfortunately, John makes himself known to the assassins by dropping a letter with his name and address. He tells Geoffrey and his chauffeur, Barley, of his adventure. Geoffrey, realizing that John's life is in danger, declares he must vanish. Spencer discovers that the livery of the murdered man corresponds to the livery of the servants of Yorick castle, and tells Countess Helena, mistress of the castle, what he had seen. With Geoffrey and Barley, John starts for Annabel, a nearby village. They encounter Pharaoh. In making their getaway they exchange shots with the gang, without serious result. They arrive at Plumage farm, on the Yorick estate, where Lady Helena had requested John and his cousin to meet her. She reveals to them that her father had converted his immense fortune into gold sovereigns and hidden them away in a secret vault in the castle. Knowing that his son, Valentine, Helena's brother, was incapable of controlling the fortune, he had revealed it to Helena alone just before his death. In some manner the news had leaked out, and Pharaoh was after the treasure. They planned that Geoffrey and Barley would go to Salzburg to watch for Pharaoh, while John was to remain at Plumage, lying low in the daytime and patrolling the roads about Yorick from dusk to dawn. Several nights go by without important incident. John visits Yorick castle and finds that Helena's brother, Count Valentine, is there and with him, on most friendly terms, is Pharaoh, as Captain Faning. Hearing that John is stopping at Plumage, Pharaoh speaks to Dewdrop. John suspects a plot.

The door of a tower was open, and Helena whipped inside. She fled upstairs and into the pleasantest bedroom I ever saw. As I followed her in, she pressed a key into my hand.

"There's a door behind that curtain."

While I was unlocking this, she twitched a coat from a cupboard and rushed to the painted table on which were combs and brushes and all things that women use.

"Have you money, John?"

"About fifty pounds," said I.

"Good."

Then she threw one look around and slipped out of the room.

"Lock it behind us, John."

A short stone stairway brought us into a little hall which was very dimly lighted and was shut by three massive doors.

"The right-hand one," said Helena. "Quick. That's a master key."

We now encountered a winding flight of steps. At the foot of this flight we came to another door, but I could not see to unlock it, so Helena took the key.

And then we were out in some passage and there on our right was a postern that gave to the outside world. But Helena turned instead to a very much smaller door, sunk deep in the wall.

A man was coming. I could hear his steps on the stone. He was out of sight, round some corner, but he was not twelve paces away.

Helena's fingers were shaking, as she fitted the master key. The lock was stiff and defied the efforts she made. As I put out my hand, I heard the man stop and swear. Then he turned on his heel and began to retrace his steps.

An instant later the door was locked behind us and we were alone in the dark.

Helena was trembling, and I put my arm about her and held her close.

"Reaction," she murmured. "I'll be all right directly. You see, we're safe for the moment. I—I'd like to sit down."

With my arm about her, we sat ourselves down on a step.

"I'm all right now," breathed Helena, lifting her head.

I let her go, and she sat back against the wall.

"Listen, John. We couldn't have crossed the drawbridge without being seen. And that would have been ruination. . . . But now we've just disappeared. The doors that were open are open, and the doors that were locked are locked. But we have vanished. This stairway leads to a grating in the wall of the moat. It's just above the water. Directly below it, under the water and, therefore, out of sight, is a footbridge of stone. That leads across the moat to another grating set in the opposite wall. The gratings are barred—not locked, and each of them's barred on this side. The farther grating admits to an old brick tunnel that will lead us under the meadows and into the woods." She got to her feet. "And now we must go. We've not a moment to lose. The ramparts don't overlook this part of the moat, and we simply must get to Plumage before Bugle and Rush."

Carefully we descended the stair, which was very damp.

The water was cold and the iron of the gratings was rusted and very harsh, but the footbridge gave good foothold and our passage was made with an ease for which I had not dared hope. Since the water came up to my loins, I made Helena lie across my shoulders and carried her over like that.

As I set her on her feet in the tunnel, I heard the Count calling her name.

"Helena! Helena!"

I hauled myself out of the water to stand by her side.

"Helena, where are you?"

Gently I closed the grating.

Again the Count lifted his voice.

"Faning!" he bawled. "Faning!"

Helena touched my arm.

"I could tell him where Faning is. He's gone to the bridge. Nobody knows of this exit, but Florin and me."

The tunnel seemed without end. It was dark and damp and noisome and ran uphill, and I was more than thankful when after five or six minutes I saw the faint light of the evening and found the air more fresh. The mouth of the tunnel was masked by a riot of undergrowth, but when we were clear of this screen, I saw at once that we stood due north of the castle.

"And now for Axel," said Helena. "And Sabre, I hope. When he can't find me, he'll remember the last two nights and come to the Plumage ride."

It was now ten minutes past nine, and dusk had come in. We had, therefore, no fear of skirting the edge of the forest, for the going was better in the meadows and we were at least half a mile from where Axel would be.

The castle was lighted now as I had never seen it, but of course we could see no movement and hear no sound. The lights suggested that the building was being searched.

We pushed on breathlessly.

We had covered half the distance when Helena caught my arm and stopped in her tracks.

Somebody was whistling—not very far away; whistling as though to bring a dog to his heels.

Then we heard Pharaoh's voice.

"Good dog," he cried. "Good dog."

The man was out in the meadows, somewhere between the bridge and the Plumage ride.

In a flash I saw what had happened.

Sabre had left the castle, and Pharaoh had seen him go. The porter, no doubt, had told him that that was the Countess' dog, and the fellow had guessed in an instant that Sabre's instinct was leading him to his mistress, wherever she was. And so he had followed Sabre, but had lost him because it was dark.

"Come on," said I. "Now that he's lost Sabre, he hasn't a chance."

"If he hears the horses," breathed Helena.

We were nearly there now, but when Pharaoh whistled again, he was not so far off as before.

As we stumbled into the ride, I found the dog paddling beside us. He may have been there for five minutes for all I know. And there was Axel waiting, ten minutes before his time.

"Good dog," cried Pharaoh.

I judged the man to be fifty paces away.

In a flash I had Helena up on the lively gray.

As she stooped to whisper to Axel, I turned to the other horse, but, perhaps because he was startled, he would not stand. As I swung myself up, he backed sideways against the gray, and before I could find my right stirrup, its dangling iron had clashed with that of Helena, making a ringing sound.

The whistle which Pharaoh was letting suddenly stopped.

I heard the man running towards us as we turned the horses about.

And then we were both sitting down and riding hard for Plumage.

We dared not spare the horses—the hunt was up.

Pharaoh would run to the castle, find the Count and induce him to order a car; and we had to ride to Plumage and drive from there to the high road before that car could reach the mouth of the private lane.

As we came to the apron—

"I'll take the horses," said Helena. "You go and get your things."

As she caught my bridle, I flung myself off the bay.

In my bedroom I wasted no time, but snatched up a razor and seized the first clothes I found; yet, ere I was back, the horses were fast in the stables and Helena was returning to take her seat in the Rolls.

Thirty seconds later the Rolls slid over the bridge.

* * * * * * *

I had often read and heard speak of "an agony of apprehension," but never until that evening, when our headlights sent darkness packing out of that lovely lane, had I understood that terrible state of mind.

Then all at once the truth stood clear, before me, and something more sinister than fear took hold of my heart.

The lane was no lane, but a trap—full two miles long. Once we were in, we could no more turn the Rolls round than a man that was buried could turn himself round in his grave.

If only we had stuck to the horses and ridden away across country to take some train. . . . But it was too late now. For better or worse we had chosen this dreadful way.

I set my teeth; and we took the rise before us with the rush of a lift.

As the Rolls swept over the crest, for an instant I lifted my foot—and then in a flash all my suspense was over and its grip was torn from my heart.

Two miles ahead a car had turned into the lane.

Helena caught my arm.

"That's the Carlotta. I know it. What can we do?"

For some extraordinary reason my senses were now as lively as they had been lately dull. I knew no hesitation; my confidence was sublime.

"We back," I said quietly. "What a mercy we hadn't got further. As it is, we've plenty of time. They can't do a mile a minute along this lane."

"But, John—"

I patted her blessed hand.

"Don't worry, my dear. It's all right. Little Arthur has got an idea," and, with that, I put out my headlights and started to take the Rolls back by the glow which her tail-lamp threw.

Two minutes later I backed her over the bridge.

"Can you see their headlights?" I asked.

"Not yet."

I began to swing around to the right, leaving the roadway and backing onto the turf. When I had gone thirty paces, I threw out the clutch.

At once we heard the Carlotta and a moment later we saw the glow of her lights.

The two of us sat in silence, listening and watching, while Pharaoh "came down like the wolf on the fold."

I do not think we were excited—the danger was past. We now were simply waiting for a car to get out of our way.

And so she did.

Well clear of the beam of her headlights, we watched her sweep down the slope and over the bridge; and as she went by to the apron, I let the Rolls leap forward and take her place on the road.

My lights were dimmed and I do not think that they saw us, for their eyes, of course, were looking the opposite way; but in any event the start which we had was deadly, for they must turn the Carlotta and we had the faster car.

As we floated in silence, I touched my companion's sleeve.

"And now where?" said I.

"We'll go to my nurse at Pommers. Her husband's a farmer there, and they'll see us through. And we'll wire to your cousin to join us and start from there."

We had the ways all to ourselves, and, indeed, I believe that we were the only beings awake in that countryside. Twice we sang through a village and now and again we could make out the form of a homestead beneath the trees. So for some 35 miles.

Then the engine of the Rolls coughed twice, and the car slowed down.

As I frowned, the truth came pelting—to sear my brain.

"What is it, John? What is it?"

"Petrol," I said hoarsely. "I meant to fill up before we patrolled this evening; but with all this Pharaoh business—"

"What is it, John? What is it?"

The nearest village lay roughly 11 miles off, and whether it boasted a pump we could not tell.

Carefully I surveyed our surroundings.

The road was a main highway. If I locked her switch and her bonnet, no man could take the Rolls, but, left on the road, she was bound to attract attention—the very sort of attention we wished so much to avoid.

Some forty-five paces ahead a track led into the forest—a decent track; what was more, it ran slightly downhill. If I could manhandle the Rolls as far as its mouth, her weight would help me to carry her out of sight. But the road, though level, was cambered.

While Helena steered and stood by to apply the brake, I moved the Rolls by the spokes of one of her wheels. The strain was great, for the car was very heavy, and the camber made such a gradient as I could not overcome. In desperation I moved her perhaps six inches towards the crown of the road, but then the weight of her beat me, and she began to return; and in my effort to hold her before I could cry for the brake I strained or tore some muscle in the small of my back.

I smothered a grunt of pain—too late for Helena's ears, before I had drawn myself up, my lady was standing beside me and asking me how I did.

"You've hurt yourself, John."

"A muscle," said I. "It's nothing. As long as I don't use it, I'll be all right." Ruefully I regarded the Rolls. "But we'll have to leave her here. As far as shifting her goes, I've shot my bolt."

McIntyre Sees 1936 as Year of Super-Thrills

The year 1936 is going to be one of super-thrills and vast excitements. The most exciting, I firmly believe, we shall ever live through. Old nations may die and new nations may be born. Europe may be in flames, and unless we watch our step we may find ourselves tinder in the consuming blaze.

WOMEN ARE NOT SO "EASY" AS MEN IN FLATTERY GAME

"What do you think of the claim that women like admiration and flattery as much as men and are no less fools than men in the hands of one of the other sex who uses that method of getting into their good graces?

"Don't you think that's ridiculous? I've never yet met a man who wouldn't believe anything charming and delightful about himself that any woman might tell him. But I've seen many a man try to bamboozle a woman and fail because he laid it on too thick." This was asked of a woman writer of note, who replied as follows:

I think our reader has hit upon an important truth in the relationship of the sexes.

I do not doubt for one moment that women like admiration as much as men—that is admiration from the other sex. Indeed I believe this is in a way a more important factor with women than with men. By that I mean that while men may "eat up" admiration from the other sex, that is not the motivating factor of their interest in them; while with some women delight in masculine admiration is largely the root of their enjoyment of the society of the other sex.

But—women are not so "easy" as men. A homely woman does not easily accept a man's insistence that she is beautiful, but many a bald, fat man has been convinced he is an Adonis. Women can be flattered, but it has to be done more subtly. Therefore the man who is wise will discriminate in his flattery. He will look for the "good points" which in some form or other are possessed by every woman, and concentrate on them, rather than attempt to endow her with charms which she realizes are not hers.

It is not that women like flattery less, but they have more difficulty than men in putting entirely to sleep their intelligence and common sense!
